

HEMOHIM

Korean functional health food supplement developed through biotechnology and radiation technologies from the food-life engineering team of the Korea Atomic Energy Research Institute (KAERI). It was a government project supported by the Ministry of Science and Technology, Korea, which spanned for 8 years, costing them 5 billion won (roughly USD $4.7 million). The team had developed this novel herbal composition, initially, for enhancing the immune system of the people working in the project. When its beneficial effect was noted, it was eventually opened and shared to the public.
